

READ-IT

What is READ-IT?

We have developed a programme to teach reading skills to people with a learning disability with the help of their support worker or family carer. READ-IT includes an on-line reading programme and an accompanying support manual.

Who are we recruiting?

People with a learning disability who would like to be able to read, can make an informed decision, have basic computing skills and have a support worker or family carer who is willing to help.

What do we plan to do?

We will invite 48 adults with a learning disability to participate in a study that uses a control design. This means that they will be put by chance into one of two groups: one will be taught to read using READ-IT, the other will have no change to their day-to-day activities. We will gather some measures (data) including reading ability, feelings about reading, wellbeing and Quality of Life. This information will help us understand how to better support adults with ID to read.

Interested in hearing more?

Contact us: Nicholas Manktelow

Nicholas.manktelow@warwick.ac.uk
07392125602